Note for parents/educators/teachers:

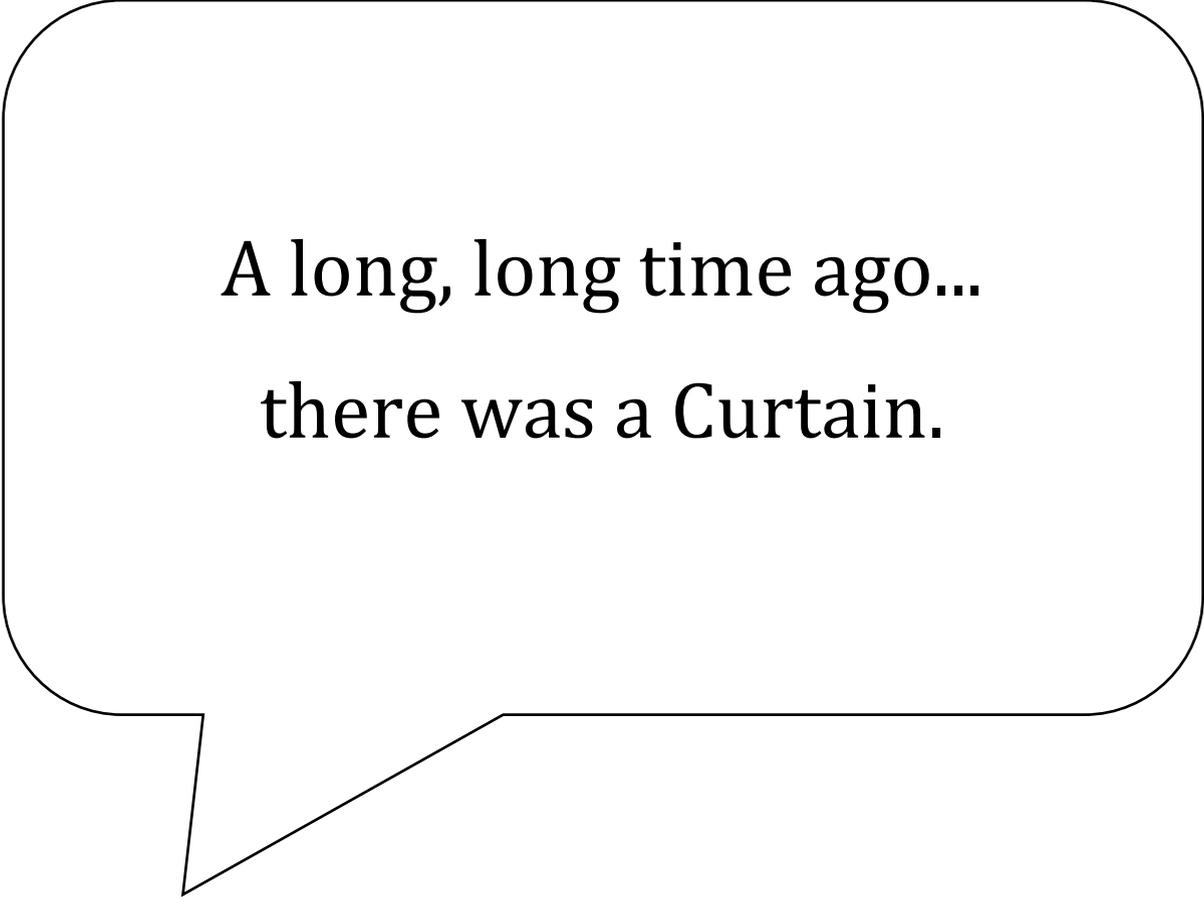

This is a book intended for children, but for adults to read. It is, therefore, a children's book with a message to be understood and interpreted by each one.

It is designed for children to illustrate each page according to their understanding of what they have read or heard.

This story should not be explained, but rather let the big minds of little people understand what needs to be understood.

It is my deep desire that you enjoy this story, which can be read over and over again, until its true message penetrates deep into the deepest part of the childlike being that lives in each one of us.

The author,
Adolfo Leitão Carvalho

A large, black-outlined speech bubble with rounded corners and a tail pointing towards the bottom-left. Inside the bubble, the text "A long, long time ago... there was a Curtain." is centered in a black serif font.

A long, long time ago...
there was a Curtain.
